

The musician tion 4a

The musician decided to have an extension built on his house. The builder paid great attention to the proportions of the building and his decision was to make a reduction in the foundations by a tiny fraction. The electrician was inside the extension to help with the reduction when there was a terrible collision between the electrician and the wall ! In the confusion the electrician put the plugs in the wrong socket, which caused a huge explosion and the television was gone! The electrician was rushed to hospital where the physician gave him a blood transfusion. Although he survived, the electrician never did other jobs. That was quite an education!

